

1More at Techfluence
September 21, 2020
By George Harding

The product being presented is wireless earbuds. They are THX certified, which provides assurance of good frequency response, low distortion and exceptional noise isolation.

(See

<https://www.thx.com/blog/new-thx-certified-headphones-hit-the-market-delivering-high-fidelity-experiences-to-listen/>

for information about THX certification.)

They connect through Bluetooth 5.0 and provide a fast and stable connection.

The buttons on each earbud provide control over volume, song selection, phone calls and voice assistance.

I like wireless earbuds because I'm not "tethered" to a device by wires and I can move around to deal with other problems, all the while listening to my music.

Phone calls interrupt the music play and can be rejected or accepted.

You can still access Siri or other assistance with a question.

The price is $162, at least for now.

See

<https://usa.1more.com/products/true-wireless-anc-in-ear-headphones-ehd9001ta>